

At last! A practical snow plow for home use...

PROVED IN MINNESOTA—Looking for a home snow plow that does the job right? Get a SNOW HOUND! It's built by Toro—builders of America's most complete line of power mowers, and it's been tested for years in rugged Minnesota weather. Look at the exclusive features...

QUICK STARTING—A carburetor heater dries air flowing into the carburetor, prevents icing. Engine is always ready to start. A simple clutch mechanism disengages the rotor, makes starting twice as easy, too.

LARGE CAPACITY—SNOW HOUND quickly clears a path 17 inches wide in snow as deep as 16 inches! And the reversible, self-clearing chute throws snow 10 to 15 feet either right or left of the forward path of the machine.

THROWS SLUSH, TOO—Specially designed rotor has four blades of extra-heavy steel that actually throw any kind of snow—freshly fallen, slushy or drifted. Rotor height is easily adjusted from 0 to 1½ inches to prevent scraping on walks, grass or gravel driveways.

POWERFUL—No bogging down or stalling with this husky engine! Full 2.5 h.p. for even the toughest jobs. That means plenty of ground-hugging weight, too—90 lbs. altogether to hold SNOW HOUND down.

LOW COST—Only $159.95. Much less than the cost of a strained heart or even a strained back. No more need for extra help, either!

Theories, Varied

The Retail Traders' Association of Australia:
Housewives prefer store clerks to be middle-aged men. The middle-aged man can still remember when courtesy was in vogue.

Bob Shores, New Mexico rancher:
The best way to get a real good cowboy brim on a hat is in the steam from your wife's pressure cooker.

Hollywood Director Bill Pine:
The villains are the most important ones in action pictures. The heroes usually can't help but be heroic, even if they're stupid.

Prof. W. S. Bullough, of Birbeck College, England:
The best thing a man can do about the approach of baldness is to rub his head with a rough towel—and not develop a complex over loss of hair.

Sherman Ives, of the Connecticut State Grange:
The United States is dam crazy. The country has gone berserk about building dams; everywhere you turn around some place is building one.

The Marriage Society of London:
There's no such thing as love at first sight—it is merely an overwhelming attraction.

Dr. D. R. Wilkie, of London University:
Snails and tortoises are not really lazy—they just have slow muscles.

The University of Wisconsin:
Pigs which eat coal are not really being thrifty. It stirs up their appetites and they end up eating more grain.

Scientist Fred Hoyle, Cambridge University:
Within a couple of years it will cost only about $2.80 a head to kill people with atomic weapons instead of the several thousand dollars a head it costs to kill people in war today.
