The most important part is the text, the creation of which takes all the forces. In it, the author explains the reason for addressing the issue, the degree of importance, the contribution to science. It is important that research does not repeat the truths known to all, open up prospects, bring practical benefit to people.

Starting to create a scientific and practical article, it is important to determine in advance with the subjects and objects of study, forming a list of the main tasks, goals, fully confirmed or disproved in summing up the results. It is desirable to provide an example of information on the research of the issue under consideration in the framework of history, a comparison of the views held by scientists in different epochs.

Important Add-ons

Not every novice author is aware of writing articles. And just sketch the main text is far from enough. Much depends on how correctly the links are placed, graphs, tables, diagrams, and other applications are given. The publication of scientific articles assumes the provision of proven, absolutely proven information obtained from several sources. Each reference is enclosed in square brackets, placed at the end of the quotation, with the explanations given in the list of used literature.

Whoever wrote the article (students, researchers, graduate students), the final stage is a brief information about the author:

- E-mail address;
- Contact phone numbers;
- rank;
- academic degree (if available);
- position;
- place of work;
- specialty cipher.
- In the absence of scientific degrees from the author, a review of the supervisor is mandatory.
