City of Camelot
Office of the Mayor

CAMELOT , IL - Roller Art has donated $100,000 to Camelot for the development of a park especially designed for rollerblade and roller – skating enthusiasts . The park will feature two oval tracks for straightforward skating as well as another area with five ramps for trick skating .

The 2.45 acre park site is located three blocks west of the city office quad . This underdeveloped land was deeded to the city two years ago by Roller Art .

Construction on the property is expected to begin within the month , and Mayor Margie Harker says the park , to be named Roller Royale , will be open by early summer .

Maureen Nowicki , spokesperson for Roller Art , said that her company is happy to be able to give something back to the community that has helped Roller Art to become successful . Roller Art employs 48 people who design and manufacture roller skates .

Roller Art has a history of giving to Camelot . In its nine years of doing business in the community , the company has donated a total of $425,000 to the city and an equal amount to local nonprofit groups .

The local company has the top selling rollerblades on the market , Rold World . Rold World , developed after years of research , combines speed with the maximum in directional control .
